

Samaira Hullur Becomes Youngest Indian Pilot [CPL Holder] at 18

Samaira Hullur, an aviation prodigy from Bijapur, Karnataka, has etched her name in history as the youngest Indian Commercial Pilot License (CPL) holder at just 18 years old.

Bijapur, Karnataka Jan 2, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Samaira's exceptional achievement not only highlights her dedication but also sets a new benchmark for young aspiring pilots across the country.

Samaira began her aviation journey by completing her ground school training and clearing all CPL exams in just six months at Vinod Yadav Aviation Academy. The academy, run by Vinod Yadav and Captain Tapes Kumar, provided her with the necessary foundation to pass all her written exams on her first attempt. "It was an intense but incredibly rewarding experience. I am grateful to Captain Tapes Kumar and Vinod Yadav for their mentorship," Samaira said.

After clearing her CPL exams, Samaira joined Carver Aviation Academy, baramati, Maharashtra, where she underwent 7 months of flight training, culminating in her final certification. The academy's rigorous program equipped her with the skills needed to fly commercially. "Carver Aviation Academy opened up a world of possibilities, broadening my understanding of what I could achieve," she added.

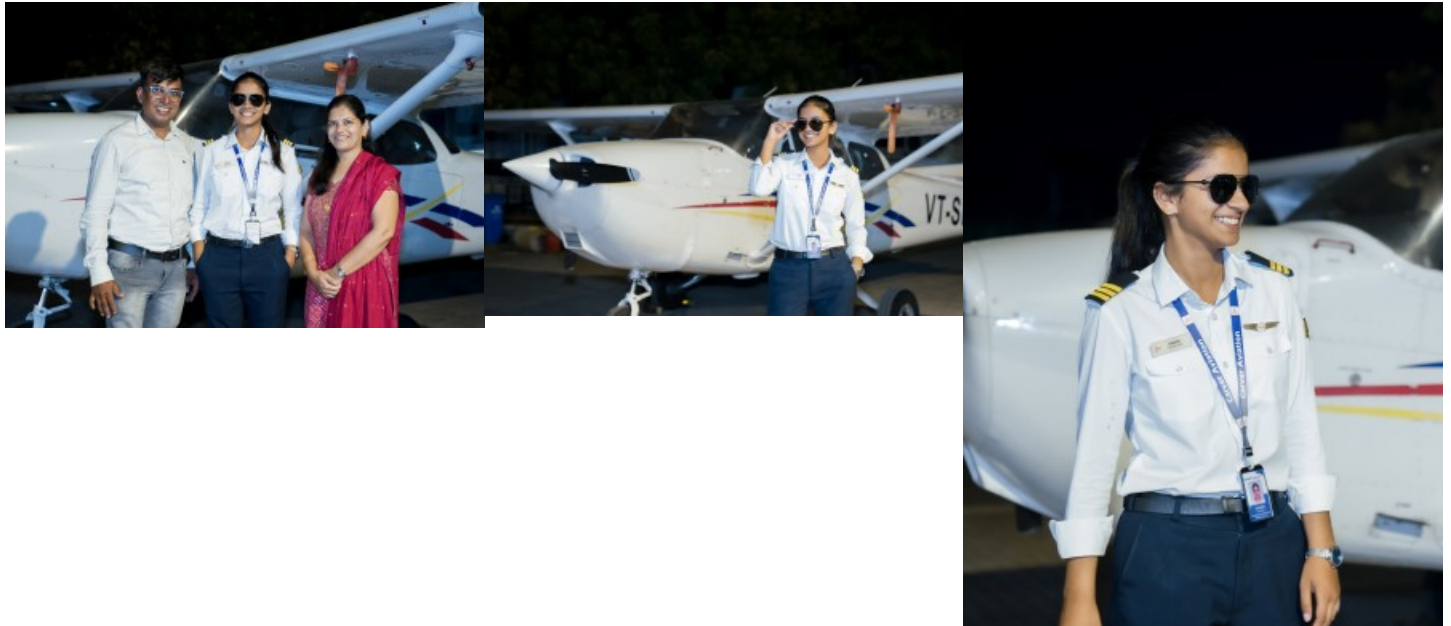

Samaira's journey was inspired by Captain Tapes Kumar, who became the youngest captain in India at the age of 25. “Captain Tapesesh’s story pushed me to set ambitious goals and challenge limits,” Samaira shared.

At just 18 years , Samaira has made history as the youngest Indian CPL holder.

Her achievement serves as an inspiration to young aviation aspirants, proving that age is no obstacle to following one’s passion.

As Samaira prepares for the next chapter of her aviation career, her story continues to inspire others to dream big and reach for the skies.
