San Francisco, California Dec 22, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - Independent filmmaker Alex Zajicek proudly announces the release of his feature film, "Sorry, We're Dead," now available for streaming and purchase on major platforms. This thought-provoking and whimsically absurd film captures the essence of creative struggle and personal discovery, all set against the backdrop of the vibrant San Francisco Bay Area.

"Sorry, We're Dead" follows the journey of Lana, a burned-out lecture editor who juggles a soul-crushing job, eccentric coworkers, and the complexities of a secret admirer. As she grapples with the fear that her dreams of filmmaking are slipping away, a series of outrageous, fourth wall-breaking incidents compel her to reevaluate what truly matters in life. With a blend of humor and poignancy, the film resonates with anyone who has ever felt lost in the chaos of existence.

This all-San Francisco Bay Area production features an outstanding local cast, including Sarah Lee, Anna Marie Sharpe, and Davied Morales. Every element of the film, from shooting to editing, showcases the rich creativity and talent inherent in the region.

Following a successful festival circuit, "Sorry, We're Dead" has garnered significant acclaim, screening at prestigious events such as the 2023 Ethos Film Awards and the 2024 Seattle Asian American Film Festival, where it was awarded the Grand Jury Prize for "Best Narrative Feature." The film also received the honor of "Best Feature Film About Women" at the Paris Lady Moviemakers Festival, further establishing its critical recognition.

"Alex Zajicek's 'Sorry, We're Dead' is a film for a new generation of creatives, challenging expectations and delving deep into an absurd and comedically original subconscious," stated the Seattle Asian American Film Festival. "The film embodies a rare and refreshing representation of Asian American artists without tokenizing the protagonist or essentializing her experiences."

Now, after wrapping up its festival journey, "Sorry, We're Dead" is available for streaming on Apple TV, Amazon Video, Tubi TV, The Roku Channel, and Fawesome.
