Los Angeles, California Dec 21, 2024 (Issuewire.com) - Mo Abersheid, founder of LA-based RockNTix – an event ticketing app that only charges a $1 service fee for event tickets – discusses how the end is approaching for the current ticketing monopoly and skyrocketing service fees, “I think we all agree that it’s time for change!”

Traditionally, event ticketing companies have profited on two fronts. They benefit from both event organizers and ticket buyers. "We are here to break this 'tradition' once and for all. RockNTix only charges ticket buyers a $1 service fee regardless of ticket price. And, we only charge venues the credit card processing fee and do not bind them to a contract, plan or subscription. So, there are no hidden costs," said Mo.

RockNTix has recruited former Livenation executive, Colin Flynn, as Director of Sales & Marketing. "Everyone who wants to should be able to experience the magic of a live event without paying the high service fees currently charged by event ticketing companies," said Colin.

"Everyone is extremely money-conscious these days, and RockNTix was created to help small venues and ticket buyers keep more money in their pocket while participating in live events," Colin continued.

"We have already seen a great deal of interest from venues looking to leave Ticketmaster and Eventbrite and come over to RockNTix. Venues are exhausted by the contracts, fees and gouging by these companies. There's a hunger to disrupt an industry that traditionally gouges venues and concert goers alike," Mo continued.

RockNTix plans to launch the new app in the first quarter of 2025 and is currently engaging with investors to accelerate the growth of the company through a major sales and marketing campaign to get the word out about RockNTix. "RockNTix will change the ticketing industry forever and become a global force by democratizing the way fans see their favorite bands," Mo added.

The RockNTix app will be available on Android and iOS.
