The influence of the late 80s music is very clear in many of the legendary bands and solo performers. One of them is starting to stand out from the rest of the crowd due to his unique sense of music and magical baritone. He goes by the name The Unknown

Artist which may not say so unknown after the new track he has released. The new tracks are called 'R.un O.ut O.f T.own' and 'All the Electricity' which show the heavy influence of the late 80s.

His music journey started when the famous Berlin Wall was taken down. All the music he heard while growing up has culminated into the interesting blends of music he creates today. The Unknown Artist is adored by his fans and the music industry due to the unusual yet soothing and melodious tunes created through his hands. This artist in his new tracks 'All the Electricity', the topic of which is the loss of once honest and deep feelings for no real reason, and 'R.un O.ut O.f T.own' has shown the world what wonders he is capable of doing with only just electric guitar and synths. Inspired by Depeche Mode or OMD (Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark) as they were breaking with the traditional way of making a pop song and were experimenting with synthesizers and sounds just like the beloved artist, but also drawing from the energy that some post-punk bands like Garbage which created a mix that uses pulsing synthesizers and electronic beats and sounds but combining that with electric-charged guitars this artist is surely able to make his music memorable.

Along with the new track this artist has also created some amazing tracks like 'Josephine', 'One Look', 'The News Today' and 'Dance to My Heartbeat' all of which are streaming on major music streaming platforms like Spotify for his fans to listen to. They can also get new updates like his plans to release a completely new track called 'Disillusion Street' which will come out in about two weeks from now and other projects through his social media profile on Instagram.
