Unlocking the power of genetics for personalised nutrition and better health outcomes for children with Autism

Sydney, New South Wales Feb 27, 2025 (IssueWire.com) - Petra Hooyenga has been accepted into the 3X4 Practitioner Network, an elite community of over 3,000 visionary health practitioners worldwide dedicated to leveraging the power of genetics to provide more personalised health guidance to their patients.

"We are incredibly excited to welcome Petra Hooyenga into the community," said Dr. Yael Joffe, Founder and Chief Science Officer of 3X4 Genetics. "Our mission with the 3X4 Practitioner Network is to provide visionary practitioners a community of like-minded practitioners who share a passion for using technology to better their patients' lives."

As an accepted member of the 3X4 Practitioner Network, Petra Hooyenga is now able to offer patients 3X4's industry-leading genetic test that helps patients understand their genes so they can live a longer, healthier and better life.

"As a clinical nutritionist, I am particularly looking forward to the benefits of offering this test to young patients with Autism. The non-invasive test provides unparalleled insight into the unique genetic set-up, status and ongoing genetic drivers for the health of the patient, allowing for highly personalised and targeted nutrition advice and therapeutic support. Plus, the genetic blueprint report empowers patients and their families to make better informed day to day decisions about food and lifestyle to support health," said Petra Hooyenga.

In addition to being approved to offer 3X4's tests, Petra Hooyenga will also have access to genetics translation training, practice integration training, and to exclusive workshops and events led by industry thought leaders.
