

Henry Mauriss Unveils New Website: A Resource for Business and Philanthropy

A Fresh Look at the Vision and Impact of Media Executive and Philanthropist

Los Angeles, California Mar 20, 2025 (IssueWire.com) - Henry Mauriss, CEO of ClearTV and founder of Joshua's Collective (in formation), is proud to announce the launch of his brand-new personal website, www.henrymaurissceo.com. Designed to serve as a collective, the site offers deeper insights into his business ventures, beneficent initiatives, and plans for media and social impact.

With a modern and user-friendly design, the new site provides visitors with an engaging experience that reflects Mauriss' mission to drive meaningful change in both business and beneficence. The website features detailed information about his leadership at ClearTV, where he has redefined out-of-home entertainment, and his commitment to addressing California's homelessness crisis through Joshua's Collective.

"This website is more than just an online presence—it's a place where people can learn about the work my teams and I are passionate about and the solutions we're creating," said Mauriss. "I want visitors to gain valuable insights into how we are reshaping media and tackling homelessness with a results-driven approach."

Visitors to the new website can explore Mauriss' professional background, key initiatives, and latest projects, as well as access exclusive content and updates. The site also highlights Joshua's Collective's efforts to provide sustainable solutions for homelessness, focusing on mental health care, addiction recovery, job training, and permanent housing.

With a streamlined interface and interactive elements, the new site makes it easier than ever for users to connect with Mauriss and stay informed about his latest work. Whether you're interested in media innovation, social entrepreneurship, or philanthropy, the site provides a central destination for learning more about how to make a meaningful impact.
