Acclaimed writer, actor, and director Kwame Augustine is set to captivate global audiences with JOHNNY, the bold and genre-defying mini-series launching on YouTube in 2025. Following a sold-out London premiere and a wonderful reception in Ghana, the series is primed to become a must-watch event for viewers worldwide.

A Story That Redefines Drama and Comedy

Set in London, JOHNNY tells the story of a fast-living, charming man battling the psychological demons of his past and present. With its sharp humour and emotional depth, the series delivers a unique blend of character-driven comedy and gripping drama.

“Johnny has been a 12-year labour of love,” says Kwame Augustine, who stars, writes, and co-directs alongside Stephanie Boateng. “The incredible response at the Curzon Mayfair premiere and the overwhelming enthusiasm in Accra reflect the universal appeal of Johnny’s story. I’m thrilled to now bring it to a global audience on YouTube.”

From Red Carpets to Global Screens

JOHNNY premiered at the prestigious Curzon Cinema in London to critical acclaim and a sold-out audience, cementing its reputation as a standout British comedy-drama. Its African debut at Ghana’s Silverbird Cinema in Accra saw audiences embrace its raw humour, emotional resonance, and unforgettable characters, with many praising the series as fresh and deeply relatable.

Coming to YouTube in 2025

With its exclusive YouTube release, JOHNNY promises to revolutionise how audiences engage with premium storytelling. Kwame Augustine’s groundbreaking vision makes the series an accessible and unmissable experience for viewers everywhere.
