San Francisco, California Mar 24, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - The California Band, The Mowgli's Are Back!

Beloved Indie-Pop Band Breaks Silence with Exclusive Comeback Interview on This Dude Started Something

Indie-pop favorites The Mowgli's, known for their chart-topping hits like "San Francisco" and "Say It, Just Say It," have officially announced their return — and they're telling the world about it on the fast-growing Gen-Z-founded podcast, This Dude Started Something.

Hosted by Oliver Welman and Brayden Krause, this exclusive episode dives deep into the band's origin story, their evolution, and — for the first time publicly — their plan to release new music beginning this April after a five-year hiatus.

In an era where bands have largely taken a backseat to solo acts, The Mowgli's are ready to bring their signature sound — full of love, energy, and big-chorus gang vocals — back to center stage. The group reflects on the early LA garage scene that birthed their success, their massive breakout moment with "Say It, Just Say It" (featured as both intro and outro in the episode), and how their message of connection and optimism feels more relevant than ever.

"We're excited about this next chapter. We've been writing nonstop and can't wait to share these songs — they feel like a true return to the heart of The Mowgli's," the band said in the interview.

The episode also includes shoutouts to longtime fans, inside stories from the road, and an honest look at life, love, and creative growth — including how Katie and Josh (now married with a toddler) built a life while building the band.
