"Our Generation Is the one that has experienced the impacts of sustainability and also will be the last to lead this change in making a better world. As a global transformational leader in sustainability, I believe we must all embrace the role of a responsible grandparent—not just to our families, but to our planet. Our generation is at a critical juncture, facing unprecedented environmental challenges that threaten the delicate balance of our ecosystems. We are witnessing dramatic shifts in climate, rapid resource depletion, and widespread environmental degradation. Yet within these challenges lies an extraordinary opportunity. I firmly believe that we are the last generation with the power to lead the change needed to secure a sustainable future. By acting with urgency, compassion, and innovation, we can implement practices and solutions that will protect our planet for the generations that follow.
