now live in California — offering a fresh way for users to find exactly what they want to eat. Unlike traditional food apps that focus on restaurants, NearFeast flips the experience by letting people search by dish.

The app allows users to explore food visually, with real reviews and creator content tied to individual meals. Whether you're looking for something indulgent, traditional, or entirely new, NearFeast shows you exactly where to find it nearby.

“Most food apps show you restaurants. We built NearFeast for people who think in flavors — not business names,” said Morteza Hoseinzadeh, founder of NearFeast. “You can finally search for what you’re craving and discover dishes visually.”

NearFeast also integrates food content from YouTube, Instagram, and TikTok — letting creators showcase their recipes, reviews, or behind-the-scenes food experiences directly on each dish page. This brings social food discovery into one seamless experience.

With global cuisine coverage, personalized discovery, and dish-first searching, NearFeast is reshaping how people find, share, and enjoy meals. It’s now available in California and rapidly expanding.
