Sabyasachi Moulik, Founding Director of SMGH Group and alumnus of King's College London, addressed future students and their families at the university's New Delhi event, sharing key lessons on global education, entrepreneurship & branding.

New Delhi, Delhi May 5, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Sabyasachi Moulik, Founder and Director of SMGH Group and an Engineering with Management graduate of King's College London, was recently invited to speak at the King's College London Offer Holders Event hosted in New Delhi. The exclusive event brought together prospective students, parents, and alumni to explore opportunities, insights, and experiences surrounding global education.

As part of the evening's alumni panel, Sabyasachi delivered a concise and impactful presentation, reflecting on his own journey from student life in London to launching a multi-brand entrepreneurial venture spanning luxury, art, real estate, and consulting across India and the UK.

In his speech, Sabyasachi outlined 5 practical principles that every student should keep in mind as they prepare to study abroad:

- Student life is bigger than just lectures
- Build your network – globally and intentionally
- Step out of your comfort zone
- Join a society (Sabyasachi was a member of the King's Entrepreneurship Institute)
- Plan early, but stay adaptable

Speaking after the event, Sabyasachi said:

"Coming back to the King's College London community — this time as a speaker — was a meaningful full-circle moment for me. Standing in front of students and families reminded me of my own journey as an offer holder, filled with questions, excitement, and uncertainty."

"I didn't go there to deliver a perfect talk. I went to share honest reflections and offer the kind of guidance I once looked for. The energy in that room, the conversations that followed — it was a reminder of how deeply education shapes not just careers, but identities."
