

South Floridian Selected to Attend Google's Connect Live 2025 in The Big Apple

Harrison C. Davies nears one billion views as he heads to Google's exclusive Local Guides event in New York City.

New York City, New York May 6, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Harrison C. Davies, a Level 10 community-driven mapmaker through the Google Local Guides program, has been selected to attend Connect Live 2025 in New York City. This prestigious event brings together top Local Guides from around the world to celebrate community contributions and explore the future of Google Maps and other evolving Google platforms.

Davies, based in South Florida, is fast approaching one billion views on his contributions—a milestone that reflects not only the global impact of his content but also a steadily growing following drawn to his unique perspective and local insight. “I am beyond excited to be invited to Connect Live 2025,” said Davies. “It’s an incredible opportunity to connect with fellow Local Guides and the Google team, sharing experiences and insights to enhance the platform for users globally, while continuing to do what I like to call ‘inspiring curiosity and contributing to the digital world.’ I just hope my fellow LGs can put up with my zany energy—lol!”

Connect Live 2025 marks the return of Google’s in-person gatherings for Local Guides after a hiatus since 2019, and it also celebrates the 10-year anniversary of the Local Guides program. This year’s format emphasizes regional engagement and collaboration, with a flagship event hosted in New York City.

About Google Local Guides

The Local Guides program is a global community of explorers who write reviews, share photos, answer questions, and update information on Google Maps. Their contributions help millions of people navigate and discover the world around them.
