

Bret Tristen Holland Nicknamed “Gon3” Is The Future Of Hyperpop

Emotional chaos meets sonic precision in this rising Fort Worth artist’s breakout moment

Fort Worth, Texas Jun 10, 2025 (IssueWire.com) - There's no formula to GON3. Just raw emotional resonance and high-velocity soundscapes that twist hyperpop, trap, and melodic rap into something undeniably personal. With every release, he's showing the world that DIY doesn't mean small. It means fearless.

His latest single, "2025" is more than a track, it's an emotional time capsule, an anthem for anyone who's ever felt like they were running out of time and feeling everything at once. Pinned by heavy 808s and a melodic structure that dances between rage and reflection, it feels like a genre of its own.

Bret pulls inspiration from a new generation of sonic rebels like Ericdoa, Nate Sib, and Aries, but his sound is something different, unfiltered, unmentored, and entirely self-taught. This gives him an edge: nothing he does feels manufactured, and every second of his music hits with lived-in truth.

"I don't make songs just to be loud," GON3 explains. "I want people to feel it when they're by themselves. That kind of connection—it's everything."

The single "2025" kicks off a larger creative wave. GON3 is set to drop his next single in July 2025, bringing even more heat to a summer that will also include regional live shows across Texas. From club stages to raw basement energy, GON3 thrives where the walls sweat and the music means something.
