

Gon3 Is Too Far Gone—And That’s Exactly Where He Wants To Be

Fort Worth’s rising hyperpop artist drops “2025” and teases a raw summer of sound

New York City, New York Jun 10, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - In a genre where speed often beats soul, GON3, the alias of Bret Tristen Holland, flips the script. His latest single, “2025,” is a layered burst of emotion wrapped in hyperpop adrenaline and melodic rap aesthetics. It’s restless. It’s real. And it’s gaining momentum fast.

Based in Fort Worth, GON3 is carving a lane that's aggressively emotional and beautifully messy. He fuses the glitch and punch of trap-hyperpop with melodies that linger. No filter. No fluff. Just an instinct to connect, and the production chops to back it up.

Listeners are describing "2025" as "a breakdown in 3 minutes", "headphone therapy", and "the kind of song you scream alone in your car."

With a strong presence on TikTok and Instagram and a stream of new fans flooding in, GON3's trajectory is pointing straight up. His next single drops in July 2025, followed by regional summer performances that'll turn speakers into confession booths.
