

Handmade Bar Soaps That Nourish and Revitalize Your Skin

Affinica aims to provide alternatives to products containing synthetic chemicals, focusing on formulations that are free from artificial additives and preservatives.

Brooklyn Center, Minnesota Jun 11, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Affinica, a company based in the U.S., has introduced a new collection of handmade bar soaps. The collection is designed to provide an alternative to commercially produced soaps by utilizing natural ingredients and traditional soap-making techniques. This release reflects a growing trend towards natural skincare options that prioritize simpler, more straightforward formulations.

The collection of handmade bar soaps is made using natural ingredients such as plant-based oils and butters, and it is free from synthetic fragrances, colors, and preservatives. The soaps are intended for individuals seeking gentler alternatives to conventional skincare products, which may contain synthetic chemicals.

One of the products in the collection is the Handmade Bar Soap – Sandalwood. This variant contains sandalwood essential oil, which has been used in skincare for its mild, soothing properties. The soap is designed to cleanse the skin without the use of harsh chemicals or synthetic additives.

Affinica's handmade soaps are made through the process of saponification, a traditional method where oils react with an alkali to form soap and glycerin. This process preserves the natural properties of the ingredients and results in a product that retains its moisture, unlike some mass-produced soaps that can strip the skin of natural oils. The company states that this method ensures a more gentle cleansing experience, potentially preventing skin dryness.

The handmade bar soap collection is formulated with natural ingredients like coconut oil, olive oil, and shea butter. These oils are known for their moisturizing and skin-nourishing properties. Coconut oil, for example, is recognized for its hydrating effects, while olive oil is known for its antioxidant content. Shea butter, frequently used in skincare products, is often included for its ability to moisturize and protect the skin.

The Handmade Bar Soap – Sandalwood features sandalwood essential oil, which has been used for its mildness on the skin. While the company does not claim specific dermatological benefits, the inclusion of sandalwood oil reflects its long history of use in skincare products aimed at individuals with sensitive skin. The sandalwood variant provides a subtle, natural scent while maintaining the soap's intended purpose of gentle cleansing.

Affinica's handmade soaps are free from artificial colors, fragrances, and preservatives. This is in line with the company's focus on natural products, and it is meant to appeal to consumers who are looking for personal care products with minimal chemical additives. Each soap variant in the collection is formulated with a clear focus on transparency, allowing customers to review the list of ingredients and make informed decisions based on their skin needs and preferences.

The soaps are made using the saponification method, which allows natural glycerin to remain in the final product. Glycerin is a naturally occurring byproduct of soap-making, and it is known for its moisturizing properties. The company notes that the retention of glycerin may help avoid the skin dryness often associated with some commercially produced soaps, which may remove this ingredient during manufacturing.

Affinica's handmade bar soaps are intended for general use and are formulated to be gentle on the skin. The company emphasizes the importance of consulting with a healthcare professional before using new products, especially for individuals with specific skin conditions or sensitivities. While the soaps are designed with natural ingredients to minimize potential skin irritation, individual reactions can vary, and the company advises customers to perform patch tests before full use.

The handmade soap collection is produced in small batches to maintain quality control over the manufacturing process. Each batch is crafted to ensure that the ingredients are properly blended and that the final product meets the company's standards for consistency and natural composition. The handmade process also allows for greater attention to detail in each bar, ensuring that the soap retains its natural properties without the addition of synthetic chemicals.

About Affinica

Affinica is a company based in the United States, specializing in natural personal care products and wellness items. The company offers a range of products, including supplements and beauty care products, that emphasize the use of natural ingredients.

Affinica operates exclusively through an online platform, which allows the company to offer its products directly to consumers. This business model helps the company maintain a focus on quality control and ingredient transparency. The company's approach is grounded in the belief that natural, straightforward products are suitable for individuals who seek simpler alternatives to mainstream personal care options.

Contact:

Information:

info@affinica.co

Customer service:

info@affinica.co

Sales:

info@affinica.co

Website:

<https://affinica.co/>

Media Contact

Affinica

@affinityco.co

+1(616)3662666

Source : Affinica

See on IssueWire