Ottawa, Ontario Jun 16, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Vida Nova Construction, a Canadian-based company pioneering sustainable modular housing, has officially joined the LaunchUp program by FasterCapital, a global venture builder and accelerator. The company, founded by Ansie van Dyk, is seeking to raise $17 million to scale its operations and expand its footprint across underserved communities worldwide.

Vida Nova Construction is reimagining housing solutions through innovative, off-grid modular homes that integrate renewable energy systems, clean water technology, and sustainable waste management. The company's model addresses the urgent global housing crisis, climate change, and infrastructure deficits, offering a scalable, eco-conscious alternative to traditional construction.

Hesham Zreik, CEO of FasterCapital, shared:

"We are thrilled to support Vida Nova Construction as part of our LaunchUp program. Their mission aligns perfectly with the global demand for sustainable and affordable housing solutions. We see great potential in their model and its adaptability across multiple markets."

"Innovative startups like Vida Nova are vital in solving some of the world's toughest problems. We are proud to back a company that is not only building homes but creating dignified living environments through smart design and green technology."

Ansie van Dyk, CEO of Vida Nova Construction, added:

"Joining the LaunchUp program is a strategic milestone for us. With FasterCapital's support, we are confident in our ability to amplify our impact, refine our business model, and accelerate growth into new regions in need of sustainable housing."

Vida Nova Construction's participation in the LaunchUp program marks a key milestone in its journey to redefine housing for the future: affordable, resilient, and environmentally responsible.
