As the price of Bitcoin breaks the $110,000 mark, investor interest in alternative income-generating opportunities such as cloud mining continues to rise. UK-based cloud mining platform DL Mining has announced the launch of its green energy-powered mining infrastructure and is offering $15 introductory funds to new users.

Founded in 2014, DL Mining provides users with a service to mine cryptocurrencies without having to purchase or maintain physical hardware. By providing computing power from GPU-optimized data centers, the platform simplifies the mining process for both new and experienced users.

Supporting Sustainable Cryptocurrency Operations

DL Mining reports that its mining operations are powered entirely by renewable energy, including solar and wind power. The company says that surplus energy is fed back into the local grid, allowing the platform to meet the increasingly stringent environmental standards of the digital asset industry.

The platform supports a variety of digital assets, including Bitcoin (BTC), Ethereum (ETH), Litecoin (LTC), Ripple (XRP), and Solana (SOL). Users will receive daily mining rewards based on their contract terms, computing power, and network conditions. DL Mining said its infrastructure integrates multiple layers of protection, including endpoint protection and DDoS mitigation. The platform provides crypto trading, real-time account dashboards, and 24/7 technical support.

Each contract is executed through a smart distribution protocol that automatically calculates returns without the need for users to manually claim rewards.
