

GainTools Releases New Version of Excel to VCF Converter with Advanced Mapping & Batch Support

Bryanston, Gauteng Jul 18, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - GainTools, an established name in the field of data conversion, has officially launched an important upgrade to their Excel to VCF Converter software. The new version has a lot of excellent characteristics that will make the contact conversion process more precise, secure, and quick. The goal of this update is to make it easier for both technical and non-technical people to convert Excel files to vCard.

GainTools' Excel to VCF Converter has been updated to accommodate additional types of Excel files and has better mapping, contact filtering, and compatibility for all major vCard versions. GainTools is always working to make data management easier and boost productivity for both enterprises and individual users. These upgrades are part of that work.

What's New in the Updated Version?

The GainTools development team has worked hard to make the product better than ever by listening to what genuine users have to say. This is what the update includes-

- It's easier for users to map vCard fields to Excel columns.
- The converter now works with all major vCard versions, so it can be used on Android phones, iPhones, MS Outlook, iCloud, and other systems.
- A new contact preview feature lets users look at all the items before they convert.
- It is now easier to use the software with big Excel sheets. Users don't have to convert contacts one by one because you may do it in batches.

- The interface has been improved so that it is easier to use.
- A free demo version is available for all users.

CEO's Word on the Update

The CEO of GainTools said about the new release-

"Our goal at GainTools is to make software that solves real-world problems in the easiest way possible." We noticed that a lot of users had trouble shifting contact information from one platform to another. We worked on making the process faster, more flexible, and totally correct with this most recent update to our Excel to VCF Converter. Our team has worked hard to add new features that are simple for everyone to use, from small enterprises to large companies. We are happy to offer a tool that really makes converting contacts easy.
