"Welcome to the latest edition of our Sports Tech Ecosystem Report. The report started in Europe but now is in its third instalment as a Global version, an important transition given the amount of activity in this highly dynamic sector," said Rohn Malhotra, Managing Director of SportsTechX. "As always, our goal remains the same: to provide a clear, structured snapshot of what's happening in the world of Sports Tech, presenting data & insights, highlighting key players from across the globe, and presenting the trends that are shaping the future of sports."

"2024 was a mixed bag of a year. While overall funding levels were down from previous years, there were strong signals of maturity: consistent B2B interest, growing M&A activity, and increased regional diversification. And most importantly, consistent interest from new capital looking to invest in sports. And this capital seems to be finally hitting the market as 2025 has started with a bang. Q1 2025 has already surpassed all of 2024 for investment! A really strong indicator that after a couple of low years, the tide is finally turning."

The report identifies three critical trends significantly impacting the global sports landscape:

- Emerging Leagues & Formats that focus on audience experience and content potential
