

Fright Nights Kentucky summons a new horror to Winchester!

Winchester, Kentucky Sep 22, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - This fall, the shadows over Winchester will grow deeper, and the air will thicken with dread. Fright Nights Kentucky, the architects of terror in the Bluegrass State, announce the rise of their most bone-chilling creation yet — The Tower of Terror.

It looms against the night sky like a cursed monument, its windows blackened, its halls echoing with the whispers of the damned. Once a beacon of grandeur, the tower has been abandoned for decades... until now. Doors long sealed have been pried open, unleashing what should have remained buried.

"The Tower isn't just a haunted attraction," says Arabella Davisson, Creative Director of Fright Nights Kentucky. "It's a descent into a waking nightmare. The higher you climb, the closer you come to the darkness that waits at the top."

ENTER... IF YOU DARE

Guests will step across the rotting threshold into a world where the line between the living and the dead blurs with each flicker of light. The abandoned hotel's grand lobby is only the beginning — above it lie floors steeped in madness, each more twisted than the last.

Blood-stained corridors. A ballroom where ghostly music plays to an audience of shadows. Elevators that don't always take you where you intend. And at the very top... something that has been waiting for you.

NOT FOR THE FAINT OF HEART

Every creak, every cold draft, every sudden scream is meticulously designed to unnerve. Live actors emerge from the darkness when you least expect it. State-of-the-art effects warp reality around you. And there will be moments — long, breathless moments — when you're not sure if you are still in the attraction... or if you've crossed into something far more sinister.
