Sydney, New South Wales Oct 4, 2025 (IssueWire.com) - Work inc is making waves in Sydney's property and business sectors with its remarkable transformation of six conjoined heritage warehouses, strategically nestled beneath the iconic Sydney Harbour Bridge in Lavender Bay. Far more than just office space, Work inc is a dynamic ecosystem where the city's industrial past meets the cutting edge of contemporary enterprise, now home to over 100 thriving businesses.

This isn't just a story about adaptive reuse, it's a living testament to commercial reinvention and heritage preservation, demonstrating how physical space can be a strategic tool for business growth.

A century of history reimaged

Originally constructed in the 1920s to house and engineer the vital steelworks for the construction of the Sydney Harbour Bridge, these warehouses are steeped in history. Their mighty concrete walls and soaring 10m high ceilings bear witness to decades of industrial activity, from housing highway patrol units to serving as car dealerships. Today, founder Mark Davidson, whose vision ignited this ambitious project, has meticulously revitalised these structures.

"When I first stumbled upon the abandoned Bay 10 warehouse, it was leaky and forgotten, but I saw incredible potential," says Mark Davidson, Founder of Work inc. "We weren't just building offices; we were building a community, creating a space where the grit of Sydney's industrial heritage could inspire the next generation of innovators. Every beam, every wall, tells a story and we've woven that narrative into a functional, beautiful environment designed to foster success."

Bespoke design meets industrial

Work inc. offers a truly unique working environment that seamlessly blends raw materials with modern, bespoke design. The expansive, light-filled spaces feature:

- Soaring heritage walls. The original concrete walls and exposed steelwork are preserved, providing a dramatic backdrop and a tangible link to the building's storied past.
- Floating glass pods. Modern, acoustically treated glass offices are suspended within the vast warehouse space, offering private workspaces while maintaining an open, connected feel.
- Curated interiors. Every detail, from vintage furniture to locally sourced art, has been carefully selected to create an inspiring and comfortable atmosphere that encourages creativity and collaboration.
- Abundant natural light. Strategic use of windows ensures that natural light floods the entire space, promoting well-being and productivity.
- Diverse breakout zones. A variety of informal meeting areas, a library, lounges, and collaborative zones are designed to facilitate inspired discussions.

This thoughtful design creates a 'built to inspire' environment, proving how curated interiors and flexible spaces directly impact workflow and fuel productivity.

Bay Ten Espresso: a coffee hub with a colourful past

Adding to Work inc's unique character is Bay Ten Espresso, a popular cafe housed within an upcycled shipping cocontainer with a truly cool backstory. This isn't just any container, it was famously seized in a major drug smuggling operation, having once been used to conceal over 600 kilograms of pseudoephedrine.

"We needed a coffee fix for our team, but there was nowhere decent nearby," says Davidson. "When we found this particular shipping container, its illicit past made it an even more compelling part of our story of reinvention. Now, it's serving up a much-needed, perfectly legal kind of fix, and it's become the heart of our community."

This once notorious vessel now serves as the vibrant barista station and kitchen, embodying Work inc.'s commitment to resourceful reuse and injecting an unforgettable anecdote into the daily lives of its members. Bay Ten Espresso has become a local landmark, drawing in not only Work inc. members but also the wider Lavender Bay community, including the thousands of cyclists who pass through Middlemiss Street daily.

Sydney's most thoughtful workspace

Work inc. is more than a co-working space, it's a case study in how physical space can shape business. From its roots in steel fabrication for the Harbour Bridge to its present as a hub for "brainworks," Work inc. offers a powerful narrative of transformation. It serves as a prime example for architecture, design, and business publications, demonstrating how strategic architectural and interior design choices can be potent tools for growth and innovation. This focus on being "Sydney's most thoughtful workspace" highlights how its design and amenities are meticulously aligned to support and elevate Sydney-based businesses.
