The Light in Hornbæk: A Visual Portrait of Our Coastal Town

The new book The Light in Hornbæk by local photographer Denmark Wolf will be released on 7 October, offering a striking portrait of the coastal town through 101 photographs of its streets, houses, and harbor. Published in a 21.6 x 21.6 cm format, the book arrives just in time for the holiday season.

"Hornbæk is full of atmosphere — not just in summer, but in the quiet light of its streets and houses year-round. My goal was to show its character in a way that locals can recognize and visitors can discover," says Wolf.

The book highlights the charm of Hornbæk's centuries-old timber-framed houses, thatched roofs, and narrow streets, showing how the town's architecture and light reflect a deeper sense of community and Danish hygge.

Highlights include:

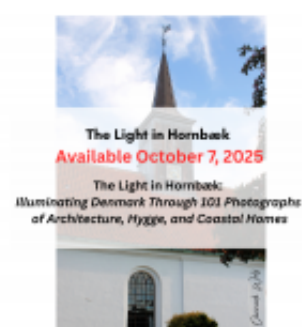

- 101 photographs of Hornbæk's houses, streets, harbor, and landscapes
- A close look at traditional architecture and everyday details
- A celebration of community, history, and Danish coastal life
- 21.6 x 21.6 cm paperback edition

Wolf's previous book, North Zealand Structure, earned five-star ratings on Amazon. With The Light in Hornbæk, he brings the same fine art approach to his own local surroundings.
