Greater Accra, Ghana Nov 27, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Hooked On ENT, a leading public relations and marketing firm committed to elevating brands, proudly announces its partnership with The Oquaye Foundation, a Ghana-based non-governmental organization dedicated to creating meaningful and lasting change through education, health, and youth empowerment.

This collaboration aims to amplify The Oquaye Foundation's mission of building a Ghana where every citizen can live with dignity, purpose, and opportunity. Through strategic communications, storytelling, and awareness campaigns, Hooked On ENT will help spotlight the Foundation's transformative programs and strengthen its impact nationwide.

In 2024 alone, the Foundation awarded over 150 small scholarships, providing books, uniforms, and tuition support to promising students who might otherwise miss educational opportunities. The foundation ensures that residents of Osu receive essential medications and health aid. Beneficiaries can apply through the Foundation's community form to qualify for assistance.

By offering training courses, certifications, and mentorship opportunities, The Oquaye Foundation helps Ghanaian youth gain the skills and experience necessary for long-term success. Rooted in Ghanaian heritage, the Foundation is dedicated to restoring and celebrating traditional values, ensuring that community bonds remain central to national progress.

"Hooked On ENT is honored to align with The Oquaye Foundation in its mission to uplift communities and inspire generational growth," said Daria Hookfin, President of Hooked On ENT. "This partnership reflects our shared belief that real change begins with empowering people through education, wellness, and cultural pride."

Together, Hooked On ENT and The Oquaye Foundation are building pathways to progress, promoting unity, and shaping a brighter future for Ghana, one community at a time.
