

Iranian Sprinter Nariman Daryapour Emerges as a Rising Talent in Global Athletics Rankings

From newcomer to national top-five sprinter in just five months — Daryapour's rapid rise marks a rare story of extraordinary athletic potential.

Mahmudabad, Mazandaran Nov 9, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Nariman Daryapour, a 24-year-old sprinter from Iran, has shown impressive progress in the sport within a short time. Over just five months of professional training, he achieved a top-five national ranking in the 60m, 100m, and 200m events — a rare rise that highlights his strong work ethic and focus.

Daryapour's performances have started to attract attention beyond Iran. He is officially listed on the World Athletics global rankings and has received invitations to several international indoor meets, including competitions in the United States. His progress reflects a developing athletic potential supported by structured training and consistency.

“My goal is to keep improving every day and represent my country at the highest level,” says Daryapour. “Seeing steady progress keeps me motivated to aim higher in the next seasons.”

Currently based in Iran, Daryapour is preparing for the upcoming indoor season, focusing on improving his performance among elite-level sprinters. His journey is becoming an example of steady growth through discipline, planning, and commitment.
