

Matthew Mason, PhD, BCBA-D, LBA: A Leader in Neurodiversity and Clinical Psychology, Enhancing Lives Across the Lifespan

Brings Over Three Decades of Expertise in Supporting Individuals with Neurodevelopmental Disorders

Columbia, Maryland Nov 5, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Matthew Mason, PhD, BCBA-D, LBA, is a Licensed Clinical Psychologist with an accomplished career spanning more than three decades. He is dedicated to diagnosing and supporting individuals with neurodevelopmental disorders, developmental disabilities, and trauma.

A graduate of Western Michigan University, where he earned his Doctor of Philosophy Degree, Dr. Mason is licensed to practice in Maryland, Virginia, the District of Columbia, and New York. In addition to his clinical licensure, he is a Board-Certified and Licensed Behavior Analyst. His work is distinguished by his expertise in neurodiversity, with a particular focus on Autism Spectrum Disorder.

Currently collaborating with a national healthcare organization, Dr. Mason offers expert assessments and clinical services to clients of all ages, from 18-month-old children to older adults. He emphasizes that while early identification of Autism Spectrum Disorder is crucial in providing timely support, it is equally important to assist individuals throughout their lifespan, ensuring they receive the care they need at every stage of life. With thousands of assessments conducted across multiple states, Dr. Mason's extensive experience is invaluable to families navigating these challenges.

In addition to his clinical work, Dr. Mason serves as a Senior Mental Health and Science Advisor at Disability Rights International, where he provides pro bono services aimed at establishing best practices for individuals with developmental disabilities. His commitment to advocacy is evident in his previous role as a Professor of Pediatrics at Georgetown University, where he led pivotal initiatives addressing healthcare inequities for those with disabilities.

Dr. Mason's clinical expertise is complemented by his leadership roles in community-based service programs, hospitals, treatment clinics, special educational programs, and state institutions. He has been an ardent advocate for human rights, championing deinstitutionalization of care, community integration services, and alternatives to incarceration for individuals with disabilities.

An innovator in the field, Dr. Mason has conducted over a thousand psychological evaluations utilizing person-centered approaches and is currently exploring the integration of AI-assisted evaluations in his practice. His scholarly contributions include publishing more than a dozen articles in respected scientific journals and clinical books.

On a personal note, Dr. Mason resides in Maryland with his wife, two neurodiverse sons, and two rescue dogs. He enjoys vacationing in Malaysia and Canada, and his hobbies include martial arts, science fiction, and dog training. An avid reader, Dr. Mason's favorite publications include the Journal of Applied Behavior Analysis and JAMA.
