Los Angeles, California Nov 6, 2025 (IssueWire.com) - Mic Lowther's "Seventeen Parcels" is an adventure of a lifetime. This mystery leads readers on a thrilling quest across the United States, brimming with twists, intricate puzzles, and the pursuit of hidden treasures. "Seventeen Parcels" opens with the final moments of billionaire Xander Moorhouse, who, with his dying breath, entrusts his attorney with a cryptic request: to send his children—Caroline, David, and Juliana—on a cross-country journey to uncover seventeen hidden parcels that hold the key to his vast fortune. The siblings gradually reconnect as their adventure unfolds, leading them through a series of surprising twists and moments of wonder.

"Readers who like the idea of a cross-country road trip, especially those who prefer cozy mysteries to gritty thrillers, will find Lowther's book a clean, inoffensive read with a happy ending and numerous visits to known and likely unknown parts of America. The book may even inspire the reader to plan their own cross-country adventure." states Mark Heisey from the US Review of Books.

For over 60 years, Mic Lowther has worked as a computer programmer and systems analyst across nine different states in the USA. Now enjoying retirement, he stays active by writing and publishing non-fiction adventure books, including children's stories.
