

“Tears of the Lamb (Radio Edit)” — A Timeless Worship Anthem Reimagined for a New Generation

Avery Stafford will release a new single on November 14, 2025.

Portland, Oregon Nov 13, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - A powerful and deeply personal worship song is stepping into the spotlight with the radio single release of “Tears of the Lamb (Radio Edit)” on November 14, 2025. Originally composed over three decades ago, this moving song carries a profound message of redemption, sacrifice, and divine love.

Avery Stafford, the songwriter behind “Tears of the Lamb,” shares, “I have had the privilege of writing songs that have inspired and ministered to me long before anyone else heard them. The composition that changed my life is called ‘Tears of the Lamb.’” First introduced at a 1993 youth rally on a humble blue cassette tape, the song quickly became a personal anthem for worship and reflection.

After its debut, “Tears of the Lamb” was recorded on the “Come Bless Da Lord” album in 1996 and later reimagined for the “Undignified” album in 2004. Despite its lasting impact, none of these earlier versions were ever released to radio—until now.

The 2025 radio edit brings a fresh, cinematic sound to this beloved worship piece. It features live studio performances with flute, violin, and viola, alongside a synthesized orchestra, complemented by Avery’s expressive vocal performance. This production blends classical instrumentation with contemporary praise energy, resulting in a dynamic and emotionally charged worship experience that connects with multiple generations.

Musically, “Tears of the Lamb” offers a spiritual reflection inspired by the emotional depth of Prince’s “When Doves Cry.” Lyrically, it celebrates the power of Jesus’ sacrifice, acknowledging both the sorrow and triumph of His willingness to give His life for others. The unique tone and arrangement of the song set it apart in today’s Contemporary Christian music landscape, while its warmth and reverence give it a holiday appeal.

As “Tears of the Lamb (Radio Edit)” reaches the airwaves, it carries with it a legacy of faith, creativity, and heartfelt worship, inviting a new generation to experience the same message that first moved hearts in 1993.
