Where Wellness Meets the Wilderness

Wagharanya is surrounded by Tadoba-Andhari Tiger Reserve, India's most bio-diverse zone. The mornings wake up to birdsong and nights filled with stars. One rests in nature-handicrafted cottages which blend into the surroundings completely. Open-air baths, decks overlooking the forest, and a swimming pool overhung by mammoth trees provide opportunities to unwind.

Wellness in Wagharanya is beyond spa therapy. It's in the stillness of dawn yoga, the stillness of guided nature walks, and the quality of fresh, organic meals. Guests are invited to unplug from screens and plug into the natural beat of life. The resort also includes forest bathing walks, a therapy that has proven to reduce stress and enhance concentration.

Sustainable by Design

The resort building is based on green principles. Natural materials, clay, and stone cool buildings and are natural-looking. Solar energy, rainwater harvesting, and waste segregation are part of operations. Wagharanya employees believe that luxury does care about the world, and each visit helps in conservation, as well as local job generation.

The philosophy has converted the property into a favorite of tourists who seek responsible holidays without any compromise on comfort, and so Wagharanya stands out to be the best resort in Tadoba for responsible travelers. The resort has also conducted various reforestation efforts and carries out wildlife awareness campaigns among surrounding villages. Economic development of the surrounding community and skill upgradation are provided through training of the local youth for hospitality.

The concept is to allow the guests to enjoy real quiet and reconnect with nature's rhythm, uncluttered by man-made light and noise. The resort will also introduce an eco-library where the guests would familiarize themselves with Tadoba's flora, fauna, and tribal lifestyle through interactive displays and local folklore.
