The “Rideshare Slayer”: A Title Earned Through Results

The nickname “Rideshare Slayer” didn’t appear overnight — it was earned through results. Fradkin became known for taking on powerful rideshare corporations and insurance companies in cases where injured passengers or drivers faced uphill battles in obtaining fair compensation.

Rideshare accident cases are notoriously complex. They often involve multiple parties, overlapping insurance policies, and corporate legal teams trained to minimize liability. Igor’s ability to navigate these challenges with precision and persistence has resulted in significant victories for his clients.

His success in rideshare-related cases demonstrates his expertise in identifying legal loopholes, understanding policy language, and presenting compelling evidence to ensure victims receive the justice they deserve. More importantly, it showcases his willingness to go head-to-head with corporate giants — a quality that makes clients trust him in high-stakes situations where much is at risk.

A Foundation Built on Academic and Professional Excellence

Before becoming a respected trial attorney, Igor Fradkin laid a strong academic foundation that continues to inform his work today. He earned dual degrees in Political Science and Russian from the University of California, Santa Barbara, before graduating cum laude from the Western State College of Law.

At law school, Fradkin's commitment to excellence was evident in every aspect of his academic journey. He finished near the top of his class and served as the Business Editor and a student writer for the Law Review, sharpening his research, analytical, and writing skills — tools that now play a crucial role in his litigation strategy.

These accomplishments not only reflect his intellectual rigor but also his dedication to mastering the complexities of the law — a trait his clients deeply appreciate when facing intricate and high-value cases.

Real Courtroom Experience: From the DA's Office to Civil Litigation

Before joining the DTLA Law Group, Fradkin gained invaluable hands-on experience at the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office as a certified law clerk. There, he handled over 20 preliminary hearings, building a strong foundation in courtroom procedure, evidence presentation, and advocacy.

This prosecutorial experience taught him how to think like an opposing counsel — a skill that now gives him a strategic advantage in personal injury litigation. He learned to analyze how arguments are built and dismantled, how evidence can make or break a case, and how to communicate persuasively to a judge or jury.

Today, those lessons translate into powerful advocacy for his clients. His ability to anticipate defense strategies and construct airtight cases has earned him a reputation as one of the most formidable personal injury litigators in Southern California.

In a state as culturally diverse as California, this skill allows him to communicate directly and effectively with a wide range of clients — especially those who might struggle to express themselves in English during a stressful legal process.

This multilingual ability goes beyond convenience. It helps build trust and clarity, ensuring that every client fully understands their rights, options, and the steps being taken on their behalf. Language barriers often prevent victims from seeking justice, but with Fradkin's help, many find both comfort and confidence knowing their attorney understands them — literally and figuratively.

His ability to connect with clients from different backgrounds underscores his reputation not only as a skilled attorney but as a compassionate advocate who truly listens.

Clients trust him because they know he values their well-being above everything else.
