

ABIM Recognizes Ellen C. Malone, DHA, MSCRA, as a Leader in Clinical Research and Healthcare Education

Advancing Medical Research, Regulatory Compliance, and Patient Safety at the University of Chicago

Chicago, Illinois Dec 9, 2025 (Issuewire.com) - Ellen C. Malone, DHA, MSCRA, is a distinguished clinical research leader and healthcare educator based in Calumet City, Illinois. As Clinical Research Manager at the University of Chicago, Dr. Malone brings more than a decade of expertise in advancing medical research, strengthening regulatory compliance, and optimizing clinical operations. Her background spans oncology, clinical research administration, and patient safety, reflecting a deep dedication to excellence in both scientific inquiry and patient-centered care. Throughout her career, she has remained committed to improving health outcomes, elevating research standards, and fostering meaningful innovation within the medical research community.

Dr. Malone's impressive career began at Northwestern University, where she dedicated seven years as a Senior Clinical Research Study Coordinator. In this role, she successfully oversaw multiple studies, managing teams to uphold the highest standards of data integrity, patient safety, and research compliance. Her foundational years as a Certified Phlebotomist at Northwestern Medicine further solidified her expertise, where she significantly contributed to oncology laboratory operations, staff training, and quality assurance.

In addition to her clinical roles, Dr. Malone is passionate about education and mentorship. She served as a Phlebotomy Instructor at Elim Outreach Training Center, guiding aspiring healthcare professionals in achieving technical proficiency while emphasizing ethical practices. Her commitment to education extends to her work as a Biology, Chemistry, Physics, ACT, and SAT Prep Teacher for the Upward Bound Program and School District 205, where she inspired students to pursue their academic and career goals.

Dr. Malone holds a Bachelor of Arts in Biology and Pre-Medicine from Augustana College, followed by both a Doctor of Health Administration (DHA) and a Master of Science in Clinical Research Administration (MSCRA) from Walden University. Her academic accomplishments, including induction into the Golden Key International Honour Society and the National Society of Leadership and Success, highlight her dedication to lifelong learning and leadership in healthcare management.

An active participant in professional conferences, Dr. Malone recently made her mark at the BWICR Conference, where she topped the Whova leaderboard, demonstrating her commitment to ongoing professional development and networking within the clinical research field.

Dr. Malone's contributions to clinical research, healthcare education, and organizational excellence exemplify her dedication to advancing the medical research community. As she continues to lead and innovate, her impact on healthcare will undoubtedly resonate for years to come.
