Multan, Punjab Jan 25, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - anifh, a groundbreaking social media platform founded by Ahmad Raza, is transforming the digital landscape by offering monetization opportunities to creators, professionals, and communities in regions where traditional social platforms have fallen short. Launched on October 15, 2025, the platform has already attracted over 200 active users who are experiencing what many consider the future of equitable social media.

While major social media platforms restrict monetization features based on geographic location, anifh takes a different approach. The platform provides equal access to earning opportunities for content creators regardless of where they live, addressing a critical gap that has long frustrated talented individuals in underserved markets.

"Social media monetization should not be a privilege reserved for users in select countries," said Ahmad Raza, founder of anifh. "We built anifh on the principle that creativity and value have no borders. If you create engaging content and build a community, you deserve the opportunity to earn from your work, no matter where you are located."

The platform caters to a diverse user base including content creators, professionals across various industries, and community builders. By removing geographic restrictions on monetization features, anifh is opening doors for millions of talented individuals who previously had limited options for generating income from their social media presence.

Since its October launch, anifh has demonstrated strong early traction with more than 200 active users already leveraging the platform's unique monetization capabilities. This early adoption signals growing demand for social media platforms that prioritize fairness and accessibility in their revenue-sharing models.

Key features of anifh include monetization tools accessible to all users globally, support for creators across multiple content categories, and community-building features designed for professionals and niche interest groups. The platform represents a shift toward more inclusive social media infrastructure that recognizes talent and engagement over geographic privilege.

As social media continues to evolve, anifh positions itself as a platform built for the next generation of digital creators who demand equal opportunities and transparent earning potential. The company plans to expand its feature set and user base throughout 2026 while maintaining its core commitment to democratized monetization.
