Maryland City, Maryland Jan 4, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Nigerian-American multidisciplinary creator Anthony Adeseye Johnson, professionally known as Ahdeseye, is gaining attention for a body of work that merges architectural design, music, and visual storytelling into a cohesive creative identity.

Johnson, the founder of Kitchenetal Design Plus LLC, has built a reputation for delivering high-end residential design projects across the United States and international markets. His work was previously recognized by global design software company 2020 Spaces, which featured him in its professional designer spotlight for creative excellence.

In parallel with his design practice, Johnson has developed a growing catalog of Afrofusion music under the name Ahdeseye, blending Yoruba musical elements, contemporary Afrobeats, and introspective Afro-R&B. His creative output spans music releases, short-form visual storytelling, and literary work, including his memoir A Shot in the Dark, which explores resilience, faith, and reinvention.

Recent digital campaigns and music releases have contributed to increased visibility across social platforms, particularly among urban audiences in Nigeria and the African diaspora. Johnson’s latest single, “Kashamadupe,” continues this trajectory, reinforcing themes of gratitude, perseverance, and cultural identity.

“Design teaches discipline and structure, while music allows emotion to speak freely,” Johnson said. “When the two come together, they tell a fuller story about rebuilding purpose after adversity.”

As African creators continue to gain international recognition across digital platforms, Johnson’s work reflects a broader shift toward multidisciplinary storytelling—where design, music, and narrative intersect to create culturally resonant experiences.

Ahdeseye’s music and visual projects are available on major streaming and social platforms, with additional releases and collaborations planned throughout 2025.
