

Dr Saleh Al Daghreer and City Orthodontics Reinforce City-Level Standards for Patient Care

Edmonton, Alberta Jan 28, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Dr. Saleh Al Daghreer, orthodontist and owner of City Orthodontics and Pediatric Dentistry in Edmonton, announced a renewed focus on city-level orthodontic care standards aimed at improving patient understanding, continuity of treatment, and consistency across long-term orthodontic care.

The initiative reflects an ongoing commitment by City Orthodontics to align daily clinical practice with urban healthcare expectations, regulatory guidance, and patient communication principles relevant to large metropolitan populations.

Orthodontic care in urban settings presents unique challenges. High patient volume, long treatment timelines, and diverse patient needs require clear systems and reliable communication. City Orthodontics has stated that its care model emphasizes structured treatment planning, documented follow-ups, and clear explanations at each stage of orthodontic treatment.

As part of this focus, the clinic continues to review internal processes related to patient education, appointment flow, and long-term care coordination. These efforts are designed to support consistent experiences for patients throughout treatment, particularly in a city environment where continuity and clarity are essential.

Healthcare planning resources often note that city-level care quality depends on predictability and accountability. City Orthodontics has positioned its approach around these principles to support patient confidence and long-term trust.

Dr. Saleh Al Daghreer said,

“City orthodontic care requires more than clinical skill. It requires systems that patients can understand and rely on over time. Our responsibility is to provide care that is consistent, clear, and aligned with professional standards so patients feel supported throughout their treatment.”

City Orthodontics continues to operate within provincial regulatory frameworks and follows established clinical and ethical guidance. The clinic has stated that its focus on structured care and communication reflects the expectations of urban healthcare delivery and the needs of a growing city population.
