

New Book BLOOD and GOLD Revisits the 1972 Munich Olympics—Challenging History, Media Narratives, and the Path to Peace

San Francisco, California Jan 13, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Author and peace advocate Christie Sikora announces the release of BLOOD and GOLD: Athletes, Tragedies and Dynamism to Peace, a deeply researched and uncompromising examination of the 1972 Munich Olympics—one of the most consequential and misunderstood moments in modern history.

With clarity, precision, and moral courage, Sikora reexamines the tragedy to uncover buried truths, long-standing injustices, and the political and media failures that shaped global perception for decades. Moving beyond official narratives, BLOOD and GOLD restores humanity to athletes and victims whose stories were eclipsed by headlines, ideology, and silence.

More than a historical account, the book challenges how history itself is recorded and remembered. Sikora weaves firsthand perspectives, historical analysis, and ethical inquiry into a broader reflection on accountability, resilience, and the human cost of conflict—inviting readers to confront uncomfortable truths often excluded from public discourse.

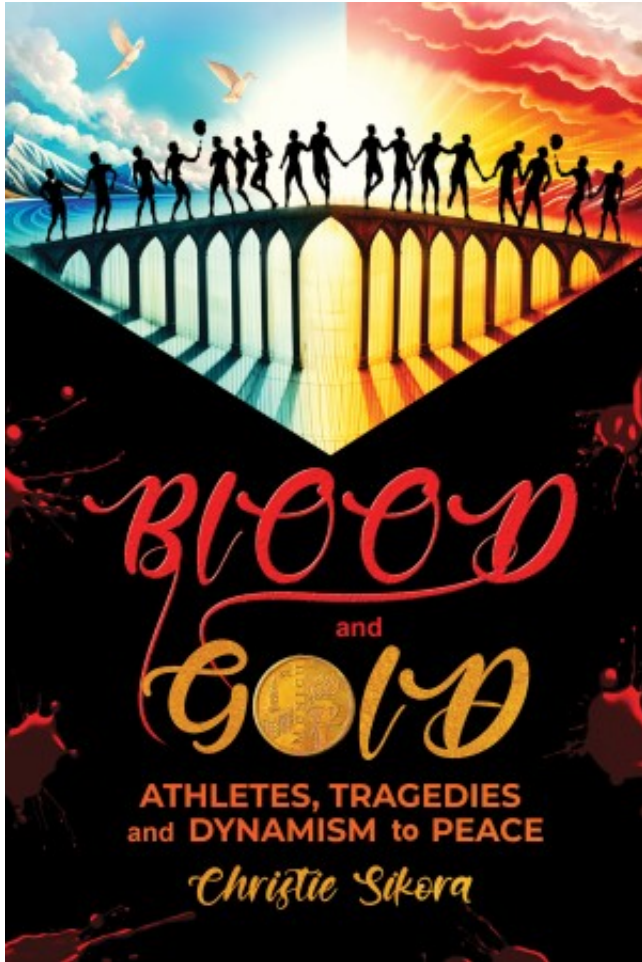

At the heart of the book is Sikora's Dynamism to Peace framework, a practical and human-centered model designed to interrupt cycles of violence and dehumanization. Rooted in education, empathy, and truth-telling, the framework reframes peace not as an abstract ideal, but as a conscious, daily practice—one that begins with awareness and leads to action.

The impact of BLOOD and GOLD extends beyond the page. A portion of the book's proceeds supports global initiatives aiding individuals and communities affected by war and conflict, ensuring that the work contributes directly to healing and transformation.

Christie Sikora is a writer, peace advocate, and founder of the Dynamism to Peace International Foundation. Her debut book is the culmination of more than five decades of reflection, research, and commitment to truth—shaped profoundly by the legacy of the 1972 Munich Olympics. Through her writing and global advocacy, Sikora is dedicated to transforming suffering into understanding, and history into a catalyst for change.
