Real Advisors announces the AI for Business Summit, a complimentary three-day virtual conference designed to help business owners integrate artificial intelligence into their operations. The summit takes place January 21-23, 2026, at 11:00 AM EST daily, addressing the growing demand among entrepreneurs for practical AI implementation strategies that deliver measurable results without requiring technical expertise.

The event features three distinguished business leaders who will share proven frameworks for AI adoption. Francis Ablola, an AI automation strategist, brings expertise in helping businesses scale through intelligent process automation. Brian Hanson, a digital marketing expert, specializes in AI-powered customer acquisition systems. Dolmar Cross, real estate entrepreneur and star of A&E's "Zombie House Flipping," offers insights on leveraging AI for competitive advantage in traditional industries.

The summit curriculum addresses five essential business areas: implementing AI-driven marketing campaigns, deploying virtual assistants to handle routine tasks, automating social media content creation and distribution, optimizing sales funnels for higher conversion rates, and streamlining operational workflows to reduce costs. Participants engage in live question-and-answer sessions during each presentation, allowing them to receive tailored recommendations based on their industry, current technology stack, and specific operational challenges they face in their businesses.

"Our focus is on immediate implementation, not technical training," says Francis Ablola, co-founder of Real Advisors. "Business owners need solutions they can activate within days to reduce costs and accelerate growth. We're delivering proven frameworks, not abstract theory."

The virtual format allows participation from any location with internet access, eliminating travel costs and scheduling conflicts. Those unable to attend the January 21-23 sessions are encouraged to register as well, as additional summit dates will be announced on the same page following the event.
