Retinue Systems Launches Product Development and SaaS Courses for Founders and Technology Professionals

Minneapolis, Minnesota Feb 27, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - An advisory and product development company, Retinue Systems, announced the launch of professional courses focused on SaaS fundamentals and product development strategy. The courses are designed to help founders, developers, and tech professionals build stronger technical and strategic foundations before scaling their products.

The launch follows an experience of advising early-stage startups and technology teams navigating challenges related to MVP development, SaaS architecture, product-market fit, and long-term scalability. Working directly with startup founders, Retinue Systems identified recurring gaps in practical knowledge around how early product decisions impact future growth.

The newly released courses address those gaps by focusing on real-world trade-offs in SaaS design, structured product thinking, architectural fundamentals, and lifecycle strategy. The curriculum concentrates on building clarity around decision-making at the earliest stages of product development.

The courses are taught by experienced technology experts and advisors who have built and led products within global organizations, including Microsoft, Google, AWS, Accenture, and Thomson Reuters. Their combined experience spans product management, cloud, AI, multi-tenant SaaS systems, product leadership, and organizational scaling.

By translating hands-on experience into structured learning modules, Retinue Systems aims to make advanced product and SaaS knowledge accessible to founders and professionals who may not yet be ready for full advisory engagement but need a stronger foundational understanding.

The courses are now available online through Retinue Systems' official platform.
