

13-Year-Old Artist Mackenzie Reff Releases Powerful Anti-War Anthem “Dreams Don’t Belong to War”

Rising young artist Mackenzie Reff (13) is set to release her deeply emotional and timely new single, “Dreams Don’t Belong to War,” available for download and streaming on all major platforms beginning April 6, 2026.

Reff and co-created alongside producer Antonio Sciortino of DreamScape Pictures, the song delivers a powerful message through the perspective of a child living in a world affected by conflict.

A Song Inspired by Innocence and Reality

“Dreams Don’t Belong to War” was born from the contrast between childhood imagination and the harsh realities of today’s world. With lyrics like “War is the killer of future dreams,” the song gives voice to children affected by conflict.

A Message That Resonates Across Generations

Mackenzie Reff delivers a performance filled with authenticity and strength. Producer Antonio Sciortino helped bring the vision to life with a cinematic and emotional sound.

In addition to her music career, Mackenzie Reff is currently working on the upcoming series “The Bully’s Club,” where she plays one of the main characters. She has experience in both singing and acting, making her a rising young talent.

“This song is not just music; it’s a message. It’s a reminder that children should never have to understand war before they understand their dreams.” – Antonio Sciortino
