Columbia, South Carolina Mar 13, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Wildlife activity around residential neighborhoods is becoming increasingly common across South Carolina. Animals such as raccoons, squirrels, bats, rodents, snakes, and opossums often enter homes while searching for shelter, especially in attics and crawl spaces. When this happens, homeowners may face property damage, unpleasant odors, and potential health risks caused by animal waste and nesting materials.

Blythewood Wildlife Removal is a certified wildlife control company serving Columbia and nearby communities. They help homeowners safely deal with these situations through professional wildlife removal and prevention services. The company focuses on humane removal methods that protect both the homeowner's property and the animals involved.

They have been in this business for 15+ years and have received mostly 5.0-star ratings on Google Profile from 200+ reviews.

Wildlife experts explain that animals frequently gain access to homes through small openings in roofs, attic vents, or damaged siding. Once inside, they can tear insulation, chew wiring, and create nesting areas that may go unnoticed for weeks. Many homeowners only realize there is a problem after hearing scratching noises in the attic or walls during the night.

Blythewood Wildlife Removal provides professional inspection and removal services designed to locate these entry points and safely remove animals from the property. Their technicians use humane trapping and relocation techniques while also identifying vulnerable areas where animals may re-enter the home.

Their primary services include:

- Rodent Removal
- Reptile Removal
- Snake Removal
- Bat and Guano Removal
- Raccoon Removal
- Mice and Rat Removal
- Opossum Removal

Raccoons and bats are among the most common wildlife problems reported in the Columbia area. Raccoons are known for forcing their way into attics and damaging roofing materials, while bats can create health concerns due to guano accumulation. Through specialized wildlife removal services in Columbia, SC, the company helps homeowners eliminate these issues and restore safe living conditions.

In addition to removing animals, Blythewood Wildlife Removal focuses on prevention through wildlife exclusion techniques. After removal, technicians seal entry points and reinforce potential access areas to prevent animals from returning. This approach helps protect homes from repeated wildlife intrusions and costly repairs.

When wildlife contamination has occurred, the company also provides attic cleanup and sanitation services to remove droppings, nesting materials, and odors that may remain after animals have been removed.

With more than 15 years of experience in wildlife control, Blythewood Wildlife Removal continues to assist homeowners dealing with nuisance animal problems throughout Columbia, Lexington, Blythewood, Chapin, and nearby areas.

Homeowners experiencing signs of wildlife activity, such as scratching noises, animal droppings, or attic damage, can learn more about professional wildlife removal services by visiting their official site.
