

Healy World launches frequency-based wellness technology across seven Latin American markets

Berlin-based wellness technology company enters Peru, Panama, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Dominican Republic, and Chile - official launch April 2nd, 2026

Land Rheinland-Pfalz, Germany Mar 12, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Frequency-based wellness technology is coming to Latin America — and it's arriving with a community behind it.

As demand for accessible, non-invasive wellness solutions grows across Latin America, Healy World is responding. The Berlin-based company officially launches in seven new markets — Peru, Panama, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Guatemala, Dominican Republic, and Chile — on April 2, 2026.

At the heart of the offering are two devices: the Healy, a wearable delivering Individualized Microcurrent Frequency (IMF) programs to support personal wellness routines, and the MagHealy, a portable Pulsed Electromagnetic Field (PEMF) device designed to complement daily wellbeing. Together, they address areas including sleep, stress, focus, balance, and physical recovery.

Equally notable is how Healy World reaches people. Rather than traditional retail, the company operates through a direct-to-consumer model powered by a global member affiliate network — enabling individuals across communities to access both the technology and a flexible business opportunity.

Building on established operations in Mexico and Colombia, the April launch marks a significant next step in Healy World's commitment to the region.

The Healy device holds 510(k) clearance (K191075) in the U.S. as an over-the-counter transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulator and is CE marked in Europe as a medical device for its cleared intended use. These devices are not intended to diagnose, treat, cure, or prevent any disease. Individual results may vary.
