

Munich Photographer Anja Jepsen Receives 4-Star Quality Certificate from the bpp

Anja Jepsen Fotografie is among a select group of photographers in Germany to receive the prestigious bpp quality certification for outstanding photographic work.

Munich, Bavaria Mar 11, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Anja Jepsen, a professional photographer based in Munich, Germany, has been awarded the 4-star quality certificate by the bpp (Bund professioneller People- & Portraitfotografen), one of the leading associations of professional portrait, people, and wedding photographers in Europe. The certification recognizes exceptional photographic quality, professional image editing, portfolio excellence, and overall website presentation. Anja Jepsen is among a small number of female photographers in Germany to receive this distinction at the 4-star level.

The bpp quality certificate is awarded every three years to selected members following a comprehensive review by an independent evaluation committee. The assessment covers all major dimensions of a photographer's professional work: image composition, exposure, color fidelity, contrast handling, post-processing quality, portfolio consistency, personal photographic style, and the quality and usability of the photographer's website. The certificate is a patented and legally protected trademark, issued exclusively to photographers who meet the association's strict standards.

Anja Jepsen Fotografie specializes in photographing meaningful moments of families and individuals throughout Munich and the surrounding area. Her services include newborn photography, baby and family photography, maternity and couple shoots, children's portraits, business and personal portrait photography, as well as wedding and event coverage. Jepsen has completed more than 1,000 photo shoots over a career spanning more than seven years and has earned a 5.0-star rating across more than 300 Google reviews.

The evaluation committee singled out several aspects of Jepsen's work. Her photographic quality received strong marks for technical precision and her consistent use of natural light. The committee also highlighted her professional image editing approach, characterized by natural skin tones, balanced contrasts, and cohesive series coordination. She meets the highest industry standards. Jepsen's portfolio was recognized for its authentic visual style, which captures genuine interactions and emotional moments rather than posed compositions.

"I am overjoyed about this great award and am delighted about the independent confirmation of my high professional standards and the quality of my photographic work," said Anja Jepsen.

A particular area of recognition was Jepsen's specialization in maternity photography, newborn photography and baby photography. Her expertise in capturing the first days of a newborn's life as well as the anticipation and emotion of pregnancy has been documented through international photography awards. Jepsen photographs newborns at home within the first days after birth, a service that requires both technical precision and a high degree of sensitivity, and accompanies expectant mothers in authentic, unposed maternity shoots throughout Munich and the surrounding area.

The bpp was founded to promote professional standards and ongoing development among portrait and people photographers across Germany, Switzerland, Austria, and the Netherlands. Its quality certificate serves as a recognized guide for clients seeking a professional photographer with verified, independently assessed credentials.
