

Solidaris Capital Releases Source Compromise Analysis Tying Bloomberg Investigation to Anonymous Document by Defendants

Nine of reporter's questions match anonymous white paper; two are verbatim

Dallas, Texas Mar 23, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Solidaris Capital LLC today released a Source Compromise Analysis documenting that every substantive line of inquiry in a Bloomberg Tax reporter's five-month investigation of the company traces to a single anonymous, unsigned opposition research document authored by or at the direction of parties in active litigation with Solidaris.

The analysis presents nine side-by-side textual comparisons between the anonymous document and the questions posed by Bloomberg Tax reporter Michael Bologna between August 2025 and March 2026. Two of the nine comparisons reveal verbatim identical language. The remaining seven track the anonymous document's specific framing, analytical choices, and coined terminology.

"This is not a case where a reporter independently arrived at similar conclusions," said Geoffrey C. Dietrich, J.D., LL.M. (Tax), Founder and Managing Principal of Solidaris Capital. "When a reporter's questions quote an anonymous attack document word for word, that is a source compromise, not an investigation."

The anonymous document, titled "Understanding the Dietrich Charitable Deduction Investment Scheme," cites the First Amended Counterclaim filed by Head Genetics, Inc. in Dallas County litigation (Case No. DC-24-21484) with paragraph-level footnotes. Head Genetics is a defendant in that litigation, subject to a Temporary Restraining Order that froze over $60 million in funds and that remains in force today. Head Genetics' founders are separately accused in Delaware Chancery Court of dissipating millions in company funds while the company was insolvent.

Among the verbatim matches documented in the analysis: Mr. Bologna's March 11, 2026 questions quote what he describes as a "Senate whistleblower complaint" using language that is word-for-word identical to the anonymous white paper. The analysis concludes that the "whistleblower complaint" filed with the Senate Finance Committee is either the anonymous white paper itself or a document derived directly from it.

The analysis also identifies the individuals behind the anonymous complaints and documents their credibility deficiencies, including over $2.5 million in tax liens, multiple dissolved business entities, client testimonials copied from a NASDAQ-listed company's website, and professional credentials that public records do not substantiate.

"After five months of investigation, neither the reporter, his editors, nor Bloomberg's outside counsel has identified the specific statute, regulation, or code section that Solidaris has violated," Dietrich said. "We have asked repeatedly. No one has answered. A tax investigation without an identified legal violation is not journalism."

Solidaris offered Mr. Bologna a background educational briefing with former IRS Office of Chief Counsel attorneys. He refused. Solidaris has also today filed a formal complaint with the United States Senate Finance Committee documenting the abuse of the Committee's oversight processes by the individuals identified in the Source Compromise Analysis.
