

Alexandra Wolfingbarger, DVM Compassionate Veterinary Care with a Focus on Dignity, Precision, and Animal Welfare

Columbus-Based Veterinarian Provides In-Home End-of-Life Services While Advancing Clinical Excellence in Surgery, Diagnostics, and Preventive Care

Columbus, Ohio Apr 16, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Alexandra Wolfingbarger, DVM, is a dedicated and highly skilled veterinarian known for delivering compassionate, high-quality care across a wide range of clinical settings. With a strong foundation in both surgical and diagnostic medicine, Dr. Wolfingbarger has built a reputation for precision, efficiency, and an unwavering commitment to animal welfare. Her professional mission centers on making an immediate, positive impact within her team while continuously growing through ongoing learning and advancement in veterinary medicine.

Currently, Dr. Wolfingbarger provides in-home pet euthanasia services throughout Columbus, Ohio, offering families a gentle and peaceful alternative during one of life's most difficult moments. Guided by her deeply held belief that pets are family, she ensures animals can pass comfortably in their own homes, surrounded by love. Through her work with CodaPet, she offers clear communication, emotional support, and dignified care, helping families navigate the end-of-life process with compassion and understanding.

For Dr. Wolfingbarger, this aspect of her work is especially meaningful. She is committed to minimizing stress for both pets and their owners while creating a calm, respectful environment that honors the unique bond each family shares with their animal companions. Her ability to combine clinical expertise with empathy has made her a trusted resource for pet owners during emotionally sensitive times.

A native of Bexley, Ohio, Dr. Wolfingbarger earned her Doctor of Veterinary Medicine Degree from St. George's University School of Veterinary Medicine in June 2022, completing her clinical training at The Ohio State University. She also holds a Bachelor of Science in Agriculture with a major in Animal Science from The Ohio State University, earned in 2016. Throughout her academic career, she demonstrated leadership and dedication to service, including serving as President of the Pre-Vet Club and participating in numerous student and community initiatives.

Professionally, Dr. Wolfingbarger has held several impactful roles within veterinary medicine. As Lead Veterinarian at the Humane Society of Delaware County from 2022 to 2023, she managed high-volume caseloads involving multiple species, implemented workflow improvements, and performed a wide range of routine and complex procedures. She later served as an Associate Veterinarian at Gigi's, where she specialized in high-volume spay and neuter surgeries, dental procedures, and advanced treatment of parvovirus using monoclonal antibody therapies. Her work with the Licking County Humane Society further highlights her commitment to community care, where she led vaccine clinics and provided preventative services while maintaining strong client relationships.

Dr. Wolfingbarger brings extensive surgical and diagnostic expertise, having performed thousands of spay and neuter procedures and contributed to complex surgeries including limb amputations, splenectomies, cystotomies, and foreign body removals. Her clinical skill set also includes emergency triage, disease identification, outbreak prevention, and advanced procedures such as prophylactic gastropexy, perineal urethrostomy, and corrective surgeries for conditions like entropion and pyometra.

Beyond her clinical achievements, Dr. Wolfingbarger is known for her collaborative spirit, strong communication skills, and dedication to ethical, patient-centered care. She thrives in fast-paced environments and is a goal-oriented problem solver who remains committed to both her patients and her colleagues.

Outside of her professional life, she enjoys exploring the outdoors, traveling, and pursuing her passion for cars. At home, she is accompanied by her beloved pets—her cat, Biscuit, known for the heart-shaped marking on his head, and her affectionate dog, Dot.

Through her clinical expertise, compassionate approach, and commitment to excellence, Dr. Alexandra Wolfingbarger continues to make a meaningful impact in veterinary medicine, enhancing the lives of animals and the families who love them.
