

America's Best In Medicine: Murlaine Jean-Baptiste, Assistant Nurse Manager At Jersey Shore University Medical Center

Medical-Surgical Nurse Combines Clinical Excellence, Compassion, and Operational Leadership to Elevate Patient Outcomes and Support Nursing Teams

Neptune, New Jersey Apr 30, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Murlaine Jean-Baptiste, BA, BSN, MEDSURG-BC, is a dedicated medical-surgical nurse and Assistant Nurse Manager at Jersey Shore University Medical Center, where she plays a vital role in overseeing daily operations within a high-acuity unit. With a strong focus on patient safety, staff development, and clinical excellence, Murlaine ensures the delivery of high-quality, patient-centered care while fostering a supportive and accountable environment for her team.

In her leadership role, Murlaine coordinates patient flow, reinforces adherence to safety and quality standards, and mentors nursing staff to promote professional growth. Known for her hands-on approach and compassionate leadership style, she prioritizes collaboration and open communication, cultivating a culture where nurses feel empowered and patients receive attentive, personalized care.

“What I enjoy most about practicing medicine is the opportunity to build meaningful connections with my patients and their families,” Murlaine shares. “Developing trust and rapport allows me to provide care that is compassionate, personalized, and truly centered on each patient’s needs.”

Since beginning her nursing career in 2019, Murlaine has developed a comprehensive clinical foundation through progressive roles, including patient care associate, telemetry monitor technician, registered nurse, and now assistant nurse manager. Her experience spans patient-centered care, clinical operations, and staff mentorship, with particular expertise in fall prevention, line and drain safety, infection control, and improving both patient outcomes and team performance. She is especially committed to strengthening nurse retention by creating supportive work environments grounded in consistency, empathy, and clear leadership.

Murlaine earned her Associate Degree in Nursing from Brookdale Community College and her Bachelor of Science in Nursing from Thomas Edison State University. She is currently pursuing a Master of Public Health at the University of Arizona Global Campus, further expanding her knowledge in population health and healthcare systems.

Board-certified in medical-surgical nursing through the American Nurses Credentialing Center, Murlaine exemplifies a commitment to continuous learning and excellence in practice. Through her leadership and dedication, she continues to make a meaningful impact on patients, families, and the nursing profession—helping to shape a more compassionate, effective, and resilient healthcare environment.
