With a remarkable 50-year career in nursing, Celine brings a wealth of experience and expertise in geriatric care, focusing on the health and well-being of older adults through comprehensive in-home health assessments.

Celine's role at Signify Health involves conducting thorough evaluations of older patients, which include reviewing medical histories, performing physical assessments, and executing point-of-care diagnostic testing. These assessments are crucial for health insurance programs, including Medicare, as they ensure that elderly patients receive the tailored care they need. Celine's academic journey is as impressive as her clinical practice. Celine previously served as a primary care provider in assisted living facilities in the Boston area, where she honed her skills in delivering personalized healthcare. Her clinical DNP practicum at Navigating Wellness Primary Care provided her with invaluable insights into patient-centered care, which she now applies in her current practice.

"I find great fulfillment in helping others in a meaningful way," Celine states. "In in-home assessment programs, I have the opportunity to provide thorough education and personalized care, which is essential for achieving better health outcomes."
