

Apple Announced a New Name as Chief Executive Replacing Tim Cook After 15 Years

Tim Cook has been replaced from his role as the chief executive of Apple after 15 years. The responsibility will be given to John Ternus from 1st September.

Cupertino, California Apr 22, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Apple has recently announced John Ternus as the new chief executive of the company. They have replaced Tim Cook from the position after 15 years. John Ternus has been working at Apple for 25 years as the head of hardware engineering. Now, he will start working in a new position in the company from 1st September. As of now, it is known that Tim Cook will become the executive chairman of the company. Cook became the chief executive of Apple in 2011 after Steve Jobs, the co-founder of the company, resigned due to health reasons.

Right now, Tim Cook will continue to work as the chief executive through the summer along with John Ternus, and after that, he will 'assist with certain aspects of the company, including engaging with policymakers around the world'. Recently, Apple celebrated its 50th anniversary. In this huge success, Tim Cook made a huge contribution. During his tenure, he made the company one of the most valuable companies in the world. Cook also described his job as 'the greatest privilege of my life'.

While talking about Ternus as the new chief executive, Cook stated 'He is without question the right person to lead Apple into the future'. In 2018, Apple became the very first public company to be valued at $1tn. Right now, Apple is worth $4tn. Thus, it has grown at a huge scale in the past 8 years. Thus, as Ternus has been selected for this new role, it can be definitely said that he is truly capable of the role.

Ternus has been in the company for a really long time. He has been a part of every major product release of Apple. He has seen the product launches like iPad, various generations of iPhone, AirPods, and Apple Watch. In addition to that, he even witnessed the transition of Mac computers. On Monday, in a statement, Ternus referred to Cook as his 'mentor'. He also stated, 'I am filled with optimism about what we can achieve in the years to come'. From the time of Steve Jobs to Tim Cook and now John Ternus, everyone has witnessed many things in Apple. Now, everyone is expecting more from the company.
