

Dreamtime Dentistry Strengthens Team with Experienced Specialists to Expand Services

Dreamtime Dentistry, based in Vista, California, is enhancing its in-house capabilities by expanding its team of experienced dental professionals to better serve patients with comprehensive care.

Vista, California Apr 23, 2026 (Issuewire.com) - Dreamtime Dentistry has announced the continued strengthening of its clinical team, bringing together experienced specialists and general dentists to expand the range of services offered in-house. This strategic move reflects a broader shift in dentistry toward integrated care models, where patients can receive more treatment under one roof.

As patient expectations evolve, convenience and continuity of care are becoming key decision factors. According to the American Dental Association, patients are increasingly seeking practices that can provide comprehensive services without the need for multiple referrals. This trend has driven many practices to rethink how they structure their teams.

Dreamtime Dentistry has responded by building a collaborative team that includes general and cosmetic dentistry, advanced restorative care, dental anesthesiology and specialized endodontic treatment.

“We didn’t want patients going from office to office trying to complete a treatment plan,” said Dr. Ryan Watkins, founder of Dreamtime Dentistry. “If we can bring the right expertise into one place, it simplifies everything for the patient.”

A key part of this expansion includes the addition of Dr. Kyung Boen, who leads general and cosmetic dentistry services. With over 25 years of experience, Dr. Boen provides a wide range of treatments, including dental implants, same-day crowns, ceramic restorations, extractions, root canals, and periodontal care.

“Dr. Boen brings a level of experience that allows us to take on more complex cases in-house,” Dr. Watkins said. “That changes what we’re able to offer our patients.”

The team also includes Dr. Joel Altshul, an endodontist specializing in advanced root canal treatments. His presence allows the practice to manage more complex endodontic cases without referring patients out to external specialists.

“We had a patient who needed a difficult root canal and was expecting to be sent somewhere else,” said Dr. Watkins. “Instead, we were able to coordinate everything here. That made the process much smoother for them.”

By expanding its team, Dreamtime Dentistry is reducing the need for external referrals, which can often delay treatment and create additional stress for patients. Studies show that fragmented care—where patients must visit multiple providers—can lead to lower treatment completion rates and increased patient drop-off.

The practice’s model focuses on coordination and efficiency. Patients can move from diagnosis to treatment with fewer disruptions, and providers can collaborate more directly on complex cases.

“Having everyone in the same place improves communication,” Dr. Watkins said. “We can discuss cases in real time and make decisions faster.”

In addition to its clinical team, Dreamtime Dentistry is supported by a dedicated staff that includes a registered dental hygienist, registered dental assistants, and front-office professionals. This structure helps ensure that both clinical care and patient experience are managed consistently.

The team expansion aligns with the practice’s move to its newly remodeled Vista office in 2021. The updated facility was designed to support a higher level of service delivery, including advanced technology and in-house treatment capabilities.

“Building the right team was just as important as building the right space,” Dr. Watkins said. “You need both to make the system work.”

This approach reflects a broader trend in modern dentistry, where practices are shifting toward more comprehensive, patient-centered models. By combining multiple specialties within a single location, practices can improve efficiency, reduce patient stress, and deliver more consistent outcomes.

What Patients Can Expect from a Multi-Specialty Dental Team

Dreamtime Dentistry encourages patients to consider the benefits of choosing a practice with a diverse, experienced team:

- Fewer referrals: More procedures can be completed in one location
- Better coordination: Providers can collaborate directly on treatment plans
- Faster timelines: Reduced delays between diagnosis and treatment
- Improved convenience: Fewer appointments across multiple offices

“Patients don’t always realize how much easier it is when everything is handled in one place,” said Dr. Watkins. “It saves time and reduces a lot of unnecessary stress.”
