properties and unforgettable in-person networked industry experiences, Well Design Summit debuts at Mayfair House in Coconut Grove this Friday, April 24, 2026.

Biophilic design and wellness-driven principles influence not only how we feel, but who we are becoming. Through nature, light, materiality, and intentional design, architecture becomes a tool for self-awareness, wellness, and future-focused living. At the core of this inaugural summit, an exploration of how our homes, buildings, and neighborhoods are no longer just places we occupy—in reality, each is an active participant in shaping our identity, health, and emotional state.

Founders of this Well Design Summit experiential series are Courtney Lukitsch and Jessica Antar www.creating-significance.com both with demonstrated careers as foresight leaders in agency-driven branding, global design-led marketing, and visual and strategic communications.

Wellness is reshaping the world's largest asset class. Encompassing a globally projected market valuation of $9T USD, the design industry is transforming real estate and lifestyle development within the built environment, determining the dynamic future landscape of longevity.

Hosting expert leaders to present their work at a curated experiential business series for the first time in Coconut Grove, the Well Design Summit showcases prominent practitioners in wellness design and luxury real estate; One Sotheby's International www.onesothebysrealty.com, Morris Adjmi Architects www.ma.com, IM/KM Architecture www.im-km.com, Ringo Studio www.ringo-studio.com, and OpenSeed Meditation www.openseed.co

Featuring a biophilic interior and its own open-air tropical climate, Mayfair House embodies a venue where design and hospitality uniquely merge to create a sensory wellness experience www.welldesignsummit.com.

Thematically the summit explores sanctuary by design with a focus on wellness spaces, biophilia, and intelligent living. During the course of the series, leading designers will share built work highlighting the architecture of identity and how to design spaces that shape who we are becoming as a global society.

Aligning with Alena Capra, a local design television host and interiors expert as moderator, this inaugural series is jointly hosted in collaboration with Jarrod Guy Randolph of Headliner, a thought-leading national forum of top-tier experts in finance, technology, and family office investment.

"We partnered with The Well Design Summit given the significance of this evolving sector and the alignment with our mission to facilitate high-trust connectivity and curated conversations designed to support human, intellectual, and financial capital at scale," says Jarrod Guy Randolph, Founder at Headliner.

Upcoming series produced by the Creating Significance team will roll out by invitation, cutting-edge networked experiences at House of Sound in New York www.soundvisionny.com; 113 Spring in Soho this June, Miami Design District, and Umbrella House in Sarasota - through October 2026.

Creating Significance is mission-driven, with other people and the world in mind. It's the idea of creating something new and valuable, focused on the individual role in making future forward actions and sustainable choices.
