

Moorman's Wildlife Management Expands Biologist-Led Home Protection Services Across Roanoke and Salem

Led by wildlife biologist Zachary Moorman, the growing team is expanding attic insulation and restoration, crawl space services, wildlife exclusion, bird netting, and advanced bird-control solutions in the Roanoke Valley.

Roanoke, Virginia Apr 9, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - Moorman's Wildlife Management is expanding biologist-led service capacity across Roanoke and Salem, with a growing team focused on pest control, attic insulation and restoration, crawl space repair and encapsulation, wildlife exclusion, bird netting, and advanced bird control solutions for residential and commercial properties.

Led by wildlife biologist Zachary Moorman, the Virginia-based company continues to expand beyond traditional wildlife services, building its presence in the Roanoke Valley with a broader focus on pest control and home protection services. As demand increases, the company is strengthening its team and service offerings to better support homeowners and property managers dealing with pest activity, wildlife entry, attic contamination, and crawl space concerns.

The company's approach is supported by ongoing training, field experience, and a biology-based understanding of wildlife behavior, pest activity, and structural impact. This combination allows Moorman's Wildlife Management to provide inspection-driven solutions that address both immediate issues and long-term prevention.

The expanded service focus now includes pest control, attic insulation and restoration, crawl space repair and encapsulation, wildlife exclusion, bird netting, and advanced bird-control solutions. These services are designed to help property owners resolve active problems while improving long-term protection through proper sealing, restoration, and structural improvements.

As seasonal conditions change, property owners often begin noticing increased pest activity, rodent entry, bird-related issues, damaged insulation, and moisture concerns in attics and crawl spaces. Moorman's Wildlife Management said the expanded team and service capacity in Roanoke and Salem are designed to meet that demand with a practical and informed approach.

"Property owners want more than a temporary fix. They want to understand what is happening, how it is affecting the structure, and what can be done to help prevent it from returning," said Zachary Moorman of Moorman's Wildlife Management. "Expanding into pest control and home services allows the company to provide more complete solutions while continuing to deliver a science-based and inspection-focused approach."

Moorman's Wildlife Management works with homeowners and commercial property owners facing a wide range of structural and pest-related concerns. Its team evaluates entry points, attic conditions, crawl space environments, and building vulnerabilities before recommending solutions based on the specific needs of the property.

The company said attic insulation and restoration have become an increasingly important part of that work, especially in properties affected by pest activity, wildlife contamination, or damaged materials. In addition to restoring attic spaces, the company also provides crawl space services, pest control treatments, and exclusion work designed to reduce recurring issues and protect the structure over time.

Bird-control services are also part of the company's expanded focus in the Roanoke and Salem area. These services include bird netting and advanced deterrent solutions intended to help properties address persistent bird activity in a practical and prevention-focused way.

Moorman's Wildlife Management, also known in some markets as Moorman's Wildlife Management and Pest Control, continues to expand its presence in the Roanoke Valley with a growing team and a broader focus on pest control and home services.
