In celebration of the double helix's discovery 73 years ago, the company is highlighting how easy establishing paternity can be given the remarkable medical advancements that have been made since. These days, expectant mothers can get answers with 99.99% accuracy as early as the seventh week of pregnancy.

At Prenatal DNA Testing, certified phlebotomists work with expectant mothers to provide secure, office-based DNA collection services. "We provide expectant mothers with reliable, definitive answers through a simple, secure process that prioritizes maternal health and clinical precision."
