

Spring Cleaning? Here's the Easiest Way to Get Rid of Old Lawn Equipment

As homeowners prepare for the season, many are discovering a simpler way to remove unwanted lawn mowers and outdoor equipment.

Indianapolis, Indiana Apr 13, 2026 (IssueWire.com) - As temperatures rise and homeowners begin spring cleaning, garages, sheds, and yards often reveal something that's been sitting untouched for months—or even years: old lawn equipment.

From broken push mowers to outdated riding mowers, these items are bulky, difficult to move, and not always easy to dispose of properly.

Many homeowners assume they can simply leave equipment at the curb or take it to a landfill. However, lawn mowers and other small engine machines often contain fuel, oil, and batteries that require proper handling and disposal.

As a result, what seems like a simple task can quickly become time-consuming and frustrating.

A growing number of homeowners are turning to Lawn Mower Recycle, a nationwide service designed to simplify the process.

Instead of trying to transport heavy equipment or navigate local disposal rules, homeowners can request coordinated pickup and removal through a single platform.

The service is designed to:

- Eliminate the need for lifting or transporting equipment
- Ensure proper handling of fuel, oil, and batteries
- Provide a more convenient alternative to traditional disposal methods

Depending on location, equipment type, and logistics, a service fee may apply.

For many, this approach removes one of the biggest obstacles during spring cleanup—figuring out what to do with large, unwanted items that don't fit into standard disposal options.

With more homeowners focusing on decluttering and preparing their outdoor spaces for the season, having a reliable solution for equipment removal is becoming increasingly valuable.
